Email Etiquette:

- Always include in which course you are enrolled
- Always include the topic of your email in the memo line
- Never assume that I read my email more than once a day, or that I will respond immediately when you send a message
- The lack of planning on your part does not constitute an emergency on my part

According to the schedule below, you should have studied, not just read, by the date of the class meeting the assigned readings to be discussed. Please note when assignments are due. Revisions to the calendar are announced in emails, through the Announcement tool, and in the Brightspace→Daily Calendar of Learning and Teaching Activities. It is your responsibility to check your email regularly and log in to the course weekly to make yourself aware of any of these notifications. If in doubt, please do not hesitate to contact me.

All assignment guidelines are explained in the document entitled "Assignment Guidelines and Course Policies," and located in BRIGHTSPACE→Quick Access Assignment Guidelines. A brief overview of everything is explained in an infographic.

If we are forced online, our scheduled class meetings will be held via Zoom. If we were to watch a film or listen to a lecture, you will be asked to complete those before class, and we will discuss in class. If we were already planning to have a discussion, this can easily occur via Zoom.

Estimated Reading or Study Times (ERT or EST) are just that – an estimate. When we encounter people, places, and concepts that are unfamiliar to us, reading takes longer. What is more, the reading times do not account for short breaks or time taken to make notes.

"...knowing how to read something results almost automatically from knowing why we are reading, and without some purpose, reading is an aimless activity." ~ Katherine Gottschalk and Keith Hjortshoj¹
