Public Opinion in a Dictatorship?

Hitler and “Ordinary Germans”

“As a vast project for social, political, and racial renewal, National Socialism offered the German people a range of ways in which to participate. Germans approached Nazi policies out of fear, opportunism, and careerism, as well as varying degrees of ideological conviction. The list can be extended: citizens were also lazy, indifferent, and ignorant. These various motivations need to stay in view. However, National Socialism exerted strong pressure on citizens to convert, to see the credibility of the people’s community, and to recognize one another as ‘racial comrades.’ The Nazis designed institutional settings, especially in community camps through which millions of Germans passed, to produce this conversion. What this meant was that individuals debated for themselves the whole question of becoming – of becoming a national Socialist, a comrade, a race-minded German, of remaining true to the old or joining the new. They grappled with questions about the importance of fitting in, the convenience of going along, and the responsibilities the individual owed to the collective.”

The figures for 1933-40 are taken from the official criminal statistics, and include death sentences by the People's Court. The figures for 1941 and 1943 are based on information drawn up by Reich Minister of Justice Thierack in 1944. The figures for 1942, 1944 and 1945 are estimates based on the number of executions carried out by Johann Reichhart, one of the three established German executioners at the time.

Police Mood/Observation Reports

“ A true assessment of the barometer of popular opinion is faced with difficulties at the present time. Because of denunciations, which are regrettably numerous, and in view of the fanaticism of some subordinate offices, it can be observed that large sections of the population and, in particular, those who are loyal to the State only give vent to their true opinion about public and especially local conditions in their most intimate circle. Otherwise, they simply keep their mouths shut because of completely unjustified fears.” ?

~Upper Bavarian government official, 11 November 1935

Atomization and Depoliticization

“Here all public life seems to have died out. We have no idea what is going on in the world and most of the time not even what is going on in our town or in the neighbouring district. A large section of the population no longer reads a newspaper. Basically, the population are indifferent to what is in the papers. It is not only always the same but, in people’s opinion, it is often untrue. The Nazi newspapers are no longer read because in the long run one cannot force people and because one cannot deny the fact that people lack the means to subscribe to a paper. Finally, 80 per cent have no inward connection with the National Socialists. Where one goes on e can see that people accept National Socialism as something inevitable. The new State with all its institutions and with its compulsion is there, one cannot get rid of it. The great mass hs come to terms with this situation to such an extent that it no longer thinks about how the situation could be changed. ...

“There can be no doubt that the Nazis have succeeded in persuading the masses to leave politics to the men at the top. The Nazi try as they say to turn everybody into committed National Socialists. They will never succeed in that. People tend rather to turn inwardly away from Nazism. ...”

White Rose

“The Scholls are the first in Germany to have had the courage to witness for the truth. . . . On their gravestones let these words be carved, and let this entire people, which has lived in deepest degradation these last ten years, blush when it reads them: . . . “He who knows how to die can never be enslaved.” We will all of us, someday, have to make a pilgrimage to their graves, and stand before them, ashamed.”

~ Friedrich Reck-Malleczewen, Diary, March 1943.

Rosenstrasse

“Without warning the guards began setting up machine guns. Then they directed them at the crowd and shouted: “If you don’t go now, we’ll shoot.”

“Automatically the movement surged backward. . . . But then for the first time we really hollered. . . .

“Then I saw a man in the foreground open his mouth wide—as if to give a command. . . . I couldn’t hear it. But then they cleared away. There was silence. Only an occasional swallow could be heard.”

~Charlotte Israel, describing 5 March 1943.
